I'm trying to develop a chrome extension to open link in an given browser and login using a.p12 certificate. Something like a bookmark for each login site (in that case the extension could open the link to google, facebook, yahoo, etc and login each one). I've found this: and can get the certificate and access token. When the user clicks the button the extension have to open the new tab and login, so there would be new login every time he clicks the button (and it has to save the certificate and the access token in localStorage). After the user is logged in, the extension could start downloading the site's content. I'm new to this, and it seems I don't understand what the chrome extension is and how to configure it to do what I want. Is there someone to tell me how to do this? A: I'd suggest: Your extension injects a pop-up The iframe contains a that points to the given site The webview loads the site in context of a popup and the document is loaded as.html file The iframe also contains a button that opens a new tab, which automatically sends a request to using ajax (from the same domain of course) You can access chrome.runtime.sendMessage() to send messages between the background page (that injects the iframe) and the extension page (that loads the site). For the ajax, you can see:

But I get this HTTP/1.1 500 Internal Server Error X-Powered-By: PHP/5.5.38 Any ideas why? A: Check that you really have the file at that location, that seems to be a typo, a space. Now she is drawing up her will, and her sister in Turkey is by her side to help. So far, they have scribbled onto a piece of paper what they see as Nooa's best wishes, but they expect the final version will take months. The will is a way for Nooa to protect her young son, Ahmad, after she dies. But that means she will have to tell him his mother had another life — one that was not as happy as his was in Syria. "It is painful to talk about this," said the 25-year-old Egypt-based activist, mother of three who has now become a refugee in Egypt. "I have to tell him that his mom was in a civil war in Syria. He is not able to understand it." Nooa and Ahmad, who is now four years old, arrived in Egypt last year after Nooa's family paid smugglers $8,000 to bring them from Turkey to Egypt. Ahmad has not yet seen his Syrian mother and wants a last visit. Nooa and her family had fled Syria in 2011, when thousands of people fled the civil war. She had a position as a nanny in the upscale neighbourhood of Salaheddine in Damascus when the conflict broke out. The violence took a toll on her family, but with the help of the UN refugee agency, which helped them with visas and other documents, they were eventually granted asylum in Turkey. Nooa was working as a cook at a restaurant, and Ahmad was a chubby toddler who liked to be carried around. Nooa's parents were separated when Ahmad was born, but that lasted only a year. "After his father left, he was lonely," she said. "I made him laugh." Once Ahmad was
